This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

To the Honourable and Right Reverend

SHUTE,

LORD BISHOP OF DURHAM, &c. &c.

MY LORD,

THIS small Production, which I now offer to your LORDSHIP, has no other claim to your notice, than as a tribute of profound respect and unfeigned gratitude. The generous benevolence shown by your LORDSHIP to my distressed Brethren, who found a refuge in your diocese; and your anxious cares to procure them relief, inspired me with these sentiments, which have been still more deeply impressed in my heart, by the obliging manner in which you condescended to honour this Work with your patronage. May the result of my labours meet with the approbation of those who, like your LORDSHIP, are equally conversant in both languages. It would be no small recompense for the long and tedious investigations attending a Work of such minute details. If I have any farther ambition, it is to show myself always worthy of the esteem and benevolence with which you have deigned to favour,

My Lord,

Your moſt humble,

and grateful ſervant,

London, Feb. 15, 1799.

ADVER-

ADVERTISEMENT.

A Pronouncing French Dictionary, upon true principles, will doubtless be a great acquisition to students in general. The want of ſuch an assistant has been found no small discouragement towards the attainment of that universal language. It is hoped the preſent one will answer the public expectation.

A portable size is preferred, as being more commodious for easy reference on all occasions. The smallness of the volume has not, however, occasioned any injurious diminution of its contents. It comprehends at least as many essential words as any larger Dictionary; and care has been taken not to swell the book, by inserting obsolete or vulgar expressions. In lieu of these are substituted the useful and technical words of arts, sciences, and trade.

These objects are of small importance compared with the superior advantages resulting from the perfect knowledge of a proper pronunciation. This the student may easily acquire by means of the standards, and of the English spelling analogous to the various sounds. Respecting this part of his plan, the Author finds himself much indebted to the friendly suggestions of the late celebrated Mr. BURKE, who advised him to adopt the Engliſh mode of spelling used by Mr. WALKER; and was pleased to point out in what manner this might be accomplished, excepting for the sounds peculiar to the French tongue, which can only be exemplified by French words.

The Author has been solicitous of bringing nearer to perfection the plan suggested by so eminent a judge of orthoepy. The care and pains he has bestowed upon it, he hopes, will recommend his work to the notice of his Subscribers and the Public. However he will not presume to say, that it has attained that degree of excellence which it may be susceptible of. He has already discovered some errors, and fears that many more have escaped his attention. Such as have come to his knowledge are rectified in the errata. Should any of those unnoticed occur to the indulgent Reader, he is respectfully requeſted to communicate them to the Compiler, who will thankfully receive such hints and observations as may tend to the improvement of his work.

RULES FOR THE PRONUNCIATION

OF THE

FRENCH VOWELS AND DIPHTHONGS,

CHIEFLY COLLECTED FROM

The Prosody of L'Abbé D'Olivet, and from the beſt Writers on this Subject.

A

A has two ſounds. It is long in bās, and ſhort in băl. The Engliſh have the firſt ſound in bar, and the ſecond in bat.

It is long in the alphabet, but ſhort when it is a verb or preposition: il ă, he has; ă, to.

It is ſhort in the beginning of a word, except in ācre, āge, āffres, āgnus, āme, āne, āpre, ārrhes, ās; and in their derivatives s ācreté, āgé, &c.

It is ſhort at the end of words, except thoſe that are taken from foreign languages, wherein it is rather long, as in ſofa, agenda, &c.

Abe* is long only in aſtrolābe and crābe.

Able is long in moſt verbs and ſubſtantives, except tăble and ĕrăble, wherein it is ſhort, as in all adjectives, according to Mr. D'Olivet; and doubtful according to Mr. Féraud. Cuſtom ſeems to be in favour of the latter †.

Abre is long, even before a maſculine ‡ termination: sābre, sābrer, &c.

Ac. General rules.—All final ſyllables are ſhort, when the vowel is

* Theſe rules chiefly relate to final ſyllables, the ſound of which is more eaſily diſtinguiſhed.

† A doubtful vowel is long when its word ends a ſentence, and generally ſhort when another word comes after it. Such vowels, in the dictionary, are printed in Italic type.

‡ A ſyllable is termed feminine when it ends with an e mute, like ſabre, aimes, parlent. All other terminations are maſculine.

followed by a consonant which is not s, x, or x: săc, nectăr, sĕl, pŏt, tĕf, &c.

—All masculine syllables, long or short in the singular number, are always long in the plural: des sācs, des tēls, des pōts, &c.

—All masculine nouns that end their singular number with s, x, or x, are long: le tēmps, le nēx, la voīx, &c.

Ace is long only in grāce, espāce, je délāce, lāce, entrelāse.

Ache is long only in lāche, tāche (a task), gāche, relāche, māche, fāche, and in the verbs derived from them, even before a masculine syllable: lācher, relāchons, &c.

Acle is long only in il rācle, il debācle; doubtful in all others.

Acre is long only in ācre (sharp, sour).

Ade is always short: aubāde, fāde, &c.

Adre is short only in lădre; long in all other words, even before a masculine syllable: cădre, cādrer, &c.

Afe, aphe, are always short: carăfe, épităphe, &c.

Affres, afre, are long only in āffres and bāfre.

Afle is long even before a masculine syllable: rāfle, rāfler, &c.

Age is long only in āge.

Agne is long only in gāgne, and all the tenses of the verb gāgner.

Ague is always short: bēgue, dăgue, &c.

Ai, a false diphthong which admits of the three sounds of the masculine é, has the sound of the close é only in j'āi; je sāis, tu sāis, bāi; of the open acute é in the middle, and at the end of words, except in essai, délai, vrai, wherein it is doubtful, according to Mr. D'Olivet; long and open according to Mr. Féraud; and of the open grave è, when followed by e, s, rs, ts, re, and when it has the circumflex accent: plaīe, jamaīs, paīrs, portraīts, faīre, faîte, &c.

Aie is always long. General rules: All vowels immediately followed by an e mute are long: plaīe, pensīe, jōie, &c. Except when there is a liquid articulation, as in păye. But many authors change the y into i, and write paie, in which case there is no occasion for this exception.

—When a vowel meets any other vowel but the mute e it becomes short, as i is long in je līe, and short in nous lions.

Aigne is always short: châtaïgne, dédaïgne, &c.

Aigre is always short: aïgre, maïgre, &c.

Ail is always short. General rule: All final syllables are short that end with a liquid l: éventāil, solèil, sœuil, &c.

Aille is short in médāille, je travăille, détāille, émāille, bāille (I give), and in all the tenses of these verbs. It is long in all other words, even before a masculine syllable: rāille, rāillons, &c.

Aillet, aillir, are always short: pāillet, jāillir, &c.

Aillon is short only in médāillon and batāillon, and in these verbs nous detaillons, émaillons, travaillons, bāillons, (we give); but long in bāillons, (we yawn), and in all other words.

Aim, ain, im, in. General rule: All nasal vowels, followed by a consonant consonant which begins another syllable, are long: jămbe, mĕntor, bŏmbe, crăindre, &c.

But when the m or n are doubled, there is no nasal sound, and the vowel is short: épigrămme, persŏnne, &c.

An exact standard for this nasal sound is not to be found in the English pronunciation. However something like it is heard in the word hang. But it must be seized immediately preceding the articulation of the g. With regard to this and other nasal sounds, as on, un, I must observe what Mr. Walker very properly remarks with regard to the sound of en in encore. "If, in pronouncing these sounds, the tongue should once touch the roof of the mouth (as it happens in pronouncing man, men, sin, son, sun), the French nasal sound would be ruined."

The French standard for this is in in vin.

Aime, the only word that has this termination is short.

Aine is long only in hâine, châine, gâine, trâine, and in their derivatives.

Air is doubtful in the singular, and long in the plural: éclair, éclairs, &c.

Aire, ais, aix, aise, aisse, are always long: paire, palaïs, &c.

Ait, aite, are long only in plaît, naît, repaît, faîte, (top).

Aitre is always long: maître, &c.

Ale is long only in hâle, pâle, un mâle, râle, and in their derivatives: hâler, pâleur, &c.

Alle is always short: mălle, &c.

Am, an, em, en. This nasal vowel has four sounds: it is always long when spelt with an a, except in comptant (ready money).

When it is spelt with e, it is, 1st. long in the beginning and the middle of words, and at the end of adjectives, as in prudent, ensemble, exemple, &c.

2dly. Generally short at the end of substantives and adverbs, as in vent, sagement, &c.

3dly. Short and slender in mien, tien, sien, bien, lien, rien, &c.

4thly. Long and slender in the plural of these words, in mentor, and some other words, wherein it has the sound of in in vin.

The first sound is heard in the two syllables of enfant, and in the first of encore, which the English have adopted with its nasal sound.

The second has for standard en in cent. Those who can pronounce en in encore, may easily obtain its short sound by dwelling less upon it. Something like it is heard in the word sand.

The third, heard in the last syllable of lien, has something like it in the word send.

The fourth, heard in mentor, has the sound of in in vin. See under Aim what is said of the nasal sounds.

In the following Dictionary the three first sounds of that nasal vowel are always spelt en, except after the hard g and k, where the a is better calculated to preserve the hard articulation of these two consonants.

Ane

Ame is long only in âme, infâme, blâme, il se pâme, un brâme; in the preterits, as aimâmes, &c. and in flâmme, although the m be doubled.

Ane, Anne, are long only in crâne, âne, mânes, la mânne, une mânne, dâmne, and condâmne.

Ape, Appe, are long only in râpe, and in the verb râper.

Apre is always long.

Aque is long only in Pâques and Jâcques.

Ar is always short. N. B. Many except char and proper names, as César, Gibraltar, &c. which are pronounced long, at least, at the end of a sentence.

Arbe. General rule: In all syllables ending with an r, and followed by another consonant which begins another syllable, the vowel is short; bârbe, bêrceau, &c.

Ard, Art, are doubtful. But when an e mute follows the d or t, the a is short. See Arbe; eafard, eafarde.

Are is always long, but becomes short before a masculine syllable: il pâre, il pâra, &c.

Arre. General rule: All vowels before rr, which form a single articulation, are long: as ârret, bârre, &c.

Exceptions to this rule will be found in their respective places.

Ari is long only in hourvâri.

As is generally long, as in tâs, bâs, âs, Pallâs, &c.

Ase. General rule: s or z, between two vowels, the laſt of which is an e mute, lengthens and opens the penultima: bâse, pêse, &c. but this penultima often becomes short before a masculine syllable, as in pêser, appâiser, &c.

Aſpe. General rule: An s articulated after a vowel, and followed by another consonant, always renders the vowel short: jâſpe mâsque, lûſtre, &c.

Aſſe is long in the substantives bâsse, châsse, (shrine), clâsse, échâsse, pâsse, mâsse, (stake), and tâsse; in the adjectives bâsse, grâsse, lâsse; in the verbs câsse, amâsse, enchâsse, compâsse, pâsse, sâsse; and in their masculine terminations, câsser, &c; in words derived from, or composed of these verbs; also in these terminations of the subjunctive mood, aimâsse, parlâsses, chantâsent. &c, it is short in all other words.

At is only long in bât, mât, degât, and in the third person singular of the preterit of the subjunctive: qu'il aimât, &c.

Ate, Âtes, are long only in pâte, hâte, il appâte, gâte, mâte, démâte; and in the preterit tenses, chantâtes, &c.

Âtre, Âttre, is only short in quâtre; bâttre, and its derivatives.

Au, (a false diphthong), has the three sounds of the French o, (See O).

It is generally long and open before a feminine termination; or a consonant at the end of a word; in the plural number, and under the circumflex accent; as in âge, châud, mâux, &c.

It

It is short in Pâul, and before two consonants, as in ăugmenter, &c.

It is long and broad before re, as in restâure, &c.: in all other cases it is generally doubtful; as in audace, epaulet, joyau, &c.

Ave is short in răve, căve, &c.; oftener long, as in grâve, entrâve, &c.; and doubtful, in brave and Batave.

Ætre is always long; cadâvre, &c.

Ax, Axe are always short; thorăx, paralläxe, &c.

E.

The French Academy distinguishes three sounds of this letter: the close, the open, and the mute.

But the open may be more or less so. It is a little open in ferme, and entirely so in procès. When it is a little open the Academy calls it open acute, and assigns for its standard the firſt e in trompette. Dumarsais, and others, call it the common or middle e: when it is entirely open, it is called open grave. Therefore we must distinguish three masculine és, viz the close, the open acute, and the open grave *.

These are termed masculine, in opposition to the mute e, which is the sign of the feminine gender in most adjectives, and all past participles.

The close é is so called from its being pronounced with the mouth almost closed, and from its slender sound.

It may be deemed short, if compared with its feminine termination, wherein the e mute obliges us to dwell somewhat more upon it, as is obvious in aisé, aisée; but it is long, if compared with the open acute, which is shorter, though it frequently bear the same accent. This is observable in créé, wherein the first é is somewhat more open than the last, and evidently shorter, according to the general rule which is to be found after the termination ÉE. See EE.

The natural standard for this é is the primitive sound by which it is known in the French alphabet, as in bonté, and answers to the first letter in the English alphabet, as in fate.

The open acute é is so named from being somewhat more open than the close é, and from the acute accent which it frequently bears. It is found in the firſt é of créé, or trompette, and is the same as in the English words, met, ebb; it is always short.

The open grave è is so called from requiring a greater opening of the mouth, and from the grave or circumflex accent which generally attends it, as in après and tête. It is similar in sound to the English e in there.

* We confine the sounds of the masculine é to the three noticed by the Academy, because those who have distinguished more have rather perplexed than perfected the pronunciation of this letter. Besides, as Mr. D'Olivet observes, "it is useless to anatomise sounds so much."

"The mute e is a mere emission of the voice, which is hardly heard; it is so imperceptible, that a man born blind could not find the least difference in hearing froc, or froque, crêp, or crêpe." D'Olivet.

Dumarsais thinks that the articulation of the consonant by which it is preceded, is sufficient to express it, as in mner, and dmander, the explanatory spelling of mener, and demander. However in monosyllables, and in the first syllables of other words, the imperfect sound of this letter is more perceptible, and may be termed guttural.

At the end of polysyllables, where it is entirely mute, it is like the second e in there, and generally serves to lengthen or open the preceding vowel: when it is more perceptible it is like the e in battery, or over; and even then the French suppress it as often as they can, especially when the preceding or following syllable has a full sound.

P. Catineau, the last grammarian who has written on this subject, gives the following example, which is very correct: "Quand vous serez le même, vous me trouverez le même. This sentence contains thirteen syllables in prose, quand-vous-se-rez-le-même-vous-me-trou-ve-rez-le-même. In poetry même would have two syllables. However, in familiar reading and conversation, it is pronounced in eight syllables only; quand-vou-srél-même-vouin-trouv-rél-même." The suppression of that e is precisely the reason why foreigners imagine the French to speak so very quick.

This imperfect sound is never suffered in two syllables together at the end of a word. To avoid this dissonance, it is changed into an open é, in the penultima of verbs, when their last syllable becomes mute, as mener, méne; some verbs double their consonant, (which produces the same effect), as tenir, que tu tiennes; others change that e into the diphthong oi, as devair, doivent.

When the pronoun je comes after its verb it produces the same effect, so that je chante, je méne, become chanté-je? mené-je? And in this case the guttural e of mener that had become open acute in méne, becomes again guttural in mené-je?

E, when under the acute accent, is generally close at the end of words, as bonté, aisé: 2. in adverbs derived from adjectives ending in é, as aisément? 3. before the feminine termination of adjectives where it is somewhat longer, as in aisée; in any other place it is almost always open acute *. It is close likewise in the termination ez, and er, when the

* It has been thought proper to adhere to the ancient custom of writing this second e with the acute accent, to avoid the double mistake frequently occasioned by those who of late have written it with the grave accent, in some terminations, as ée, éde, &c. Those who are unacquainted with Mr. D'Olivet's rules, being misled by the grave accent, give to that é the sound of the open grave è, whilst, on the other hand, they are induced to confound with the close é, all the open acute ones, which have not.

the r is silent; and open acute in any other place where it is not open grave, or doubtful.

It is generally open grave under the circumflex, and grave accent, sometimes doubtful, as will be seen hereafter.

N. B. The following rules relate to the open acute é, and to the open grave, when the word close is not mentioned.

Ede, Ebre, Ec, Ece, are always short; bēte, mēre, &c.

Eche is long only in bēche, lēche, grēche, pēche, (fishing, or peach), nevēche il pēche, (he fishes), dépēche, empēche, prēche, and in all the tenses and persons of these verbs.

Ible, Ect, Ede, Edre, are always short; sičele, insčcte, čder, &c.

Ee is always long and close, as in aimée, &c. See Aie.

Eé. General rule: All vowels before another vowel which is not the mute e, are short; crčé, fčal, hăir, &c.

Ef is always short: Effe, Efle, are long only in grēffe and nēfle.

Ege is always long; collēge, &c. Mr. Feraud makes it short. The prevailing custom seems to be for pronouncing it long at the end of a sentence, and short in any other place.

Egle is always short; règle, sčigle, &c.

Egne is doubtful; regne, dougne, &c.

Ēille is long in vēille, vičillard, vičillesse, which have the sound of the close é.

Ein, Ein, Einte, are always long. See Aim.

Eine is long only in rēine.

Ētre is long in Rētre.

Ele is long only in zēle, pēle, frēle, pēle-mēle, grēle, il se fēle, il bēle.

Em, En. See Aim and An. But there is no nasal sound in Bethlém, itčm, amčn, examčn, hymčn, &c. and whenever the m or n is articulated the e is open acute.

Eme is short only in sème. It is doubtful in crème; and long in any other word. However the terminations in ième are frequently heard short before another word.

Ene is long only in cēne, chēne, scēne, gēne, alēne, rēne, frēne, arēne, pēne, and in all proper names. Enne is always short, étrčnne, &c.

Epe is always long; crēpe, &c.

Epre is short only in lčpre, &c.

Epte, Eptre, are always short; précčpte, sccptre, &c.

Eque is long only in évēque, archevēque.

Er is long and open in fēr, enfēr, mēr, amēr, hivēr: long and close in légēr, altēr; and in all nouns and verbs, as aimēr, bergēr, &c. when not been subjected to this partial reform. A little attention to the above rule will be sufficient to prevent the mistaking of the close é for the open acute. As to the exceptions to this or any of these rules, the similar spelling of every word will remove all doubts.

the r is silent: but when the r is articulated, as it must be, especially in verbs, before a word beginning with a vowel, the e is open acute, and short.

Erbe, Erce, Erse, Erche, Ercle, Erde, Erdre, are all short. See Arbe.

Erd, Ert, are doubtful; il perd, désert, &c.

Ere is doubtful, frère, chimère, &c. but it is constantly long in the third plural persons of verbs; ils espčrent, parlčrent, &c.

Erge, Ergue, Erle, Erme, Erne, Erpe, Erte, Ertre, Esque, Este, Estre, are all short. See Arbe.

Errc is always long, even before a masculine syllable; guērre, vērrons, &c.; but it is short when the two rr are heard separately, as in čr-reur, &c.

Esse is long only in abēsse, profēsse, confēsse, prēsse, comprēsse, cēsse, lēsse, exprēsse, il s'emprēsse, il profēsse.

Et is long only in arrēt, benēt, forēt, genēt, prēt, aprēt, acquēt, intérēt, tēt, protēt, il ēst.

Ete is long only in bēte, fēte, arbalēte, boēte, tempēte, quēte, conquēte, enquēte, requēte, arrēte, crēte, tēte: it is doubtful in êtes and hommčte, and short in all the reft.

Etre is long only in ētre, salpētre, ancētre, fenētre, prētre, champētre, hētre, chevētre, guētre, je me depētre.

Eu; this diphthong has three different sounds: it is long and close in jēûne, (fasting); short in jĕune, (young); long and open in bēurre.

The first has no standard in English: but it may be obtained by pressing the lips a little forward, in such a manner, as to leave to the breath a narrower passage than for the e of over, and by dwelling longer upon it.

The second is somewhat more open than the e of over, and can hardly be distinguished from it.

The third may be obtained by opening the lips somewhat wider, and in a more circular form, than for the e of over, and by protracting the sound *.

Eu, unless accented, is short in the beginning and in the middle of words; hčureux amčuter, &c.; it is doubtful at the end; feu, jeu, &c.; and when it is long it has the close sound of eu in jeûne, unless it be followed by an r.

Euf is always short: nčuf, včuf, &c.

* No grammarian, I believe, has ever distinguished this third sound, so different from the two first. Hence some pronounce bēurre, lēurre, &c. with the sound of eû in jeûne, which is a very vicious pronunciation; for in French, as in English, the r generally opens the sound of the preceding vowel. By others, and especially by foreigners, feux, ayeux, généreux, jeûne, &c. are pronounced with the sound of eu in beurre, which is no less exceptionable.

Eule,

Eule is long only in mēule.

Eune is long only in jēûne, (fasting).

Eur is generally short, lĕur, pĕur, &c.; it is doubtful in cœur, chœur, sœur; and long open in all plural nouns.

Eure is doubtful, but always open, heure, inférieure, &c.

Evre is doubtful, lèvre, sèvre, &c.

Eux, Euse, are always long and close; fēux, jēux, heurēuse, &c.

Eve is long only in trēve, grēve, rēve, rēver: it is doubtful in fève, brève, il achève, crève, se lève, although mute in crever, achever, se lever.

Ex, Exe, are always short; perplĕx, sĕxe, &c.

N. B. All the terminations of the three following vowels, which are not noticed in these Rules, are constantly short.

I.

This letter has two sounds. It is long in gīte, and short in amĭ. The standard for the first in English is ie in field, and of the second i in fig.

Idre is long only in hīdre and cīdre.

Ie is always long. See Aie.

Ien when it is dissyllable, both syllables are short, as in lĭ-ĕn; but it is doubtful when it is monosyllable, as in mien, tien, &c.; when it is long it has the sound of in in vin. See An

Ige is doubtful, as in tige, prodige, litige, il oblige, &c.

Ile is long only in île, hūile, style, tūile, presqu'île.

Im, In. See Ain.

Imes is long only in abīme, dīxme, and in the preterit tenses, vīmes, prīmes, &c.

Ire is doubtful: empire, soupire, &c.; but always long in the preterit tenses, prīrent, punīrent, &c.

Ise is always long; surprīse, &c.

Isse is long only in these terminations of the subjunctive; fīsse, prīsses, punīssent, &c.

It is long only in the preterit of the subjunctive; qu'il prît, qu'il fît, &c.

Ite is long in bénīte, gīte, vīte, and in the preterit tenses, vītes, finītes, &c.

Itre is long in épītre, huītre, lītre, regītre; but short in regĭstre, and all the rest.

Ive is long only in adjectives; vīve, craintīve, &c.

Ivre is long only in vivre (substantive).

O.

This letter has three sounds. It is long and open in trône, short in nŏble, long and broad in aurōre.

N. B. This third sound has not, I believe, been noticed by any grammarian. However the pronunciation of o in aurore, corps, alors, &c. as o in trône or noble, would be highly improper.

This sound is regularly found before an r supported by other consonants, or an e mute; and before an r alone when its word ends a sentence.

The standard in English is, for the first, o in robe; for the second, o in rob; for the third, o in lord.

O in the beginning of a word, is long only in ōs, ōsier, ōter, hōte.

Obe is long only in glōbe and lōbe.

Ode, Oge, are long only in rōde, dōge.

Oi a diphthong that sometimes has the sounds of wa in wăr, or wărt; sometimes those of e in thēre or ĕbb. It is doubtful at the end of words where it has always the sounds of wā or wă, moi, toi, Roi, &c.

Oie is always long: jōie, &c.

Oient a false diphthong that has always the sound of the open grave è, ils aimoient, &c.

Oin a diphthong which has the sound of in in vin, preceded by the English w. See Aim.

Oir is doubtful: savoir, espoir, &c.

Oire is always long: bōire, memōire, &c.

Ois, oise, oisse, oitre, oivre, are always long, whether they have the sound of wā, or of an open grave è.

Oit is long only in il parōit, connōit, and croit (he increases).

Ole is long only in drōle, pōle, geōle, mōle, rōle, contrōle, il enjōle, envōle, vōle (he steals).

Om, on. This nasal vowel has no exact standard in English; but something like it is heard in song. See Aim. In French its standard is on in mon, and it is always long.

Ome is short only in Rome. Omme is always short.

One is always long when the n is not doubled: trône, &c.

Or is always short, according to Mr. D'Olivet. Mr. Féraud makes it short only in castŏr, butŏr, encŏr; but longer in all the other words, when r is followed by a d or a t. The opinion of the latter seems to prevail, especially when the word ends a sentence. Therefore, o in or, e:sor, port, bord, &c. should be placed in the class of the doubtful vowels.

Ore is always long and broad: encōre, évapōre, &c. But it becomes short before a feminine syllable: évapŏrer, &c. unless followed by two rr, which form a single articulation, as in eclōrrai, &c.

Os, ose, are always long: repōs, oppōse, &c.

Osse is long only in grōsse, fōsse, endōsse, engrōsse, and in their derivatives, which preserve the ō long even before a masculine syllable: grōsseur, &c.

Ot is long only in impōt, lōt, dépōt, entrepōt, supōt, prevōt, rōt.

Ote is long only in hōte, cōte, apōtre, ōte. The three last preserve the ō long even before a masculine syllable: cōté, ōter, maltōtier, &c.

Otre is long in apōtre, and doubtful in nôtre and vôtre.

Ou a false diphthong, which is long in roūle, and short in boūle. The first has for its standard, in English, the two oo in mood; the second, the two oo in good.

Oudre, oure, are always long: moūdre, je loūe, &c.

Ouille is long only in rōuille, il dérōuille, embrōuille, débrōuille; but becomes short before a masculine syllable: rouiller, brouillon, &c.

Oule is long only in mōule (muscle), la foule, sōule, il foule, écrōule, rōule.

Oure is doubtful: bravoure, &c.

Ourre is always long; but ourr becomes short before a masculine syllable, contrary to the rule after Arre: courrier, bourrade.

Ousse is long only in pousse.

Out is long only in aōut, cōut, gōut, mōut.

Oute is long in absoute, joute, croute, voute,; il cōute, broute, gōute, ajoute; but mostly short before a masculine syllable: jouter, &c.

Outre is long only in pōutre and cōutre.

U.

This letter has two sounds; it is long in būse, and short in bŭt.

There is no standard for these sounds in English. To form the first, observe the situation of the tongue when you pronounce the English letter a. It widens itself into the cheeks, so that it touches the first grinders. When the tongue is in this situation, advance both lips a little forwards, shutting them at the same time in such a manner as to leave a narrow oval passage for the breath. This movement will lightly press the tongue between the grinders, and its tip against the fore-teeth of the inferior jaw, and thus let the breath pass which is necessary to emit the sound of the French u. Its short sound is formed by dwelling less upon it.

Uche is long only in būche, embūche, débūche.

Ue is always long: vūe, tortūe, &c.

Uge is doubtful: déluge, juge, &c.

Ule is long only in brūle, and in all the tenses of brūler.

Um, un. See Im. This nasal vowel has no standard in English. Its sound is formed by lowering the inferior part of the mouth somewhat more than for the pronunciation of u, making at the same time the opening of the lips more circular, and throwing the breath against the interior part of the roof, whilst the tongue touches lightly the grinders in removing a little from the fore-teeth of the inferior jaw.

Umes is long only in preterit tenses: parūmes, reçūmes, &c.

Ure is always long: injūre, parjūre, &c.

Usse, usses, ussent, are always long, except in La Prusse, Les Russes.

Ut is long only in fût (hogshead), affût; and in the preterit of the subjunctive, qu'il fût, &c.

Ute is long only in flûte, and in preterit tenses, lûtes, parûtes, &c.

N.B. Few of these rules are without some exceptions. These exceptions, together with the pronunciation of the proper and improper diphthongs that are not noticed in these rules, and likewise the various articulations of consonants, are shewn in the similar spelling of their respective words.

But as words are spelt as they are pronounced when alone, or before a consonant, we shall particularly notice here the final consonants which cease to be silent when they meet a word beginning with a vowel.

DIRECTIONS for the Articulation of the Final CONSONANTS before a VOWEL or H mute.

1st, General Rule.—Final consonants are to be articulated before a word beginning with a vowel or H mute *.

2d, General Rule.—All final consonants that are articulated when a word stands alone, or before the consonant of another word, preserve the same articulation before a vowel, unless otherwise mentioned in the following observations.

B is articulated only in radoub, and proper names, even before a consonant.

In the middle of words, before s or t, it has the articulation of a p.

C. When the final c is articulated, it has the articulation of a k.

It is always silent in accroc, arsenic, broc, cotignac, marc (weight, or grounds), estomac, lacs (love-knots); in the last syllable of succinct, and of porc-épic; and after the nasal sounds, as banc, convainc, &c.

However, it is articulated in donc at the beginning of a sentence and before a vowel; also in franc-encens, franc-alleu, du blanc au noir.

* No rule is more frequently cited, nor has so many exceptions, even in a public speech wherein it is more strictly adhered to. On this point harmony must be first attended to. Whenever the connexion of a final consonant produces a discordant sound it must be avoided; for, as Mr. D'Olivet has very properly remarked, "the French prefer an irregularity to a discordance."

Excepting the above mentioned case, the connexion should take place, even in conversation, when the first word determines, qualifies, or modifies the second; as the article before its noun; the adjective or pronoun before its substantive; the substantive before its adjective; the noun or pronoun before its verb; the verb before its pronoun, adverb, object, or end; the adverb before an adjective or participle.

D. When

D. When the final d is heard before a vowel or h mute, it has the articulation of a t.

It is always silent in sourd, nid, nud, in the terminations in ond, rond, &c. and after an r, as in verd, fuyard, accord, &c.

In other words it is frequently suppressed in conversation.

It should never be suppressed, 1st. in de fond en comble; 2d. after quand, before il, ils, eux, elles, on, en, a, au, aux; 3d. after adjectives followed by their substantives: grand homme, grand arbre, &c. 4th. after the third person of verbs, when they are followed by their pronoun personal, or the preposition à; repond-il? il entend-à-demi, &c.

F. The final f is generally articulated even before a consonant.

It is silent, even before a vowel; 1st, in bailiff, clef, cerf; but is always heard in corne de cerf: 2d, in chef and nerf when used in the following expressions, chef-d'œuvre, nerf de bœufs, although it must be articulated in any other place; 3d, in plural nouns, as bœufs, œufs, &c. except chefs, wherein it is always articulated.

G. The final g, when it is not silent, has the articulation of a k.

It is articulated, 1st, in sang and rang before an adjective, sang échauffé, rang élevé, &c. 2d, in these or similar sentences, suer sang et eau, de rang en rang, &c. 3d, always in bourg.

According to Mr. Féraud it is also heard in long before a substantive: long été, &c. which he spells lon-kété. The word long before a vowel is generally avoided, or the g suppressed in the pronunciation.

In joug some pronounce it as g in bag, even before a consonant; others suppress it even before a vowel.

H. H is seldom, and ought never to be final in French. It has no articulation.

When it is deemed aspirate, "it only communicates to the vowel the properties of a consonant; that is to say: if the preceding word end with a vowel, that vowel is never suppressed; if it end with a consonant, that consonant is never connected with the vowel which follows. To this is confined all the effect of the aspirated H." D'Olivet.

This pretended aspiration, so different from that of the English, is nothing else than the hiatus occasioned by the meeting of two vowels, as in go on, go again.

N. B. The h is preserved in the similar spelling only in words before which no vowel is suppressed, and with which no consonant is connected.

It is proper to notice here some irregularities of this letter.

In conversation or prose h is mute in Henry; it may be aspirated in poetry.

According to the Academy it is better to aspirate it in hideux. The contrary custom still prevails.

It is aspirated in Hollande and Hongrie, but mute in toile or fromage d'Hollande, Reine or point d'Hongrie.

It is mute in huit and its derivatives; however we spell and pronounce le huit, le huitième, la huitaine, as if it were aspirated.

Onze and its derivatives, and oui used substantively, produce the effects of the aspirated h. No vowel is suppressed before these words, nor any consonant connected with them, le onze, les onzièmes, &c. le oui et le non, tous vos ouï, &c. although we spell and pronounce je crois qu'ouï, instead of je crois que oui.

L. The final l is never pronounced in baril, chenil, fusil, gentil, gril, outil, nombril, persil, soul, sourcil, pouls, fils, cul. But gentil in gentil-homme, and gril in verses, take the liquid articulation of gl in seraglio.

In conversation, some people, whom Richelet calls refiners, suppress it in quelque, quelquefois, quelqu'un, though they pronounce it in quel and quelconque. They suppress it likewise after the pronoun il, ils; and instead of pronouncing il dit, ils ont dit, parle-t-il encore? as if spelt il-di, il-zon-di, parl-ti-len-kor? pronounce i-di, i-zon-di, parl-ti-en-kor?

Mr. Chambaud observes, with regard to this last point, that the l cannot be silent in reading; and that it would be better to pronounce it always, to avoid double meanings. Since this suppression of the l may occasion ambiguity, it cannot be too carefully avoided.

M. The final m is never articulated when it makes a nasal sound. It is always articulated in hem! item, and in foreign names, Amsterdam, &c. However, m is silent in Adam and Absalom, which have a nasal sound.

N. The final n, when it makes a nasal sound, is articulated before a vowel only in the following cases:

1st, Adjectives before their substantives, and mon ton, son, rien, un, and bien (adverb), lose their nasal sound in connecting their n with a following vowel: certain auteur, divin amour, bon ami, rien au monde, un homme, bien-aimé, &c. pronounce cer-té-no-teur, di-vi-na-mour, riè-ne-monde, bo-na-mi, u-nom, biè-né-mé.

2d, Benin and malin ought not to be placed before a substantive, except malin esprit, wherein malin preserves its nasal sound, and a second n is articulated before esprit: malin-nespri.

3d, En and on preserve their nasal sound, but a second n is articulated before a vowel: en entrant, on assure, &c. pronounce en-nen-tran, on-na-sure. But the first after an imperative, and the second after its verb, are never connected: par-lez-en à votre ami, a-t-on appris, &c.

P. The final p of coup, beaucoup, and trop, and of the words that have it articulated before a consonant, are the only ones heard before a vowel.

Q. When

Q. When the final q is not silent, it has the articulation of a k. It is always heard in cinq, when alone, and before a vowel; also in coq, but never in coq-d'inde.

R. The final r is generally articulated before vowels, at least in reading.

Except, 1st, Monsieur and Messieurs, though it be always heard in le sieur, les sieurs.

2d, The plural of nouns ending in er, wherein the s alone is articulated like a z.

3d, It is often suppressed in conversation before consonants in notre, votre, quatre, pronounced not, vot, quat; but never in Notre père qui êtes aux cieux, Notre-Dame, quatre-vingt, nor at the end of a sentence.

4th, Sometimes also it is suppressed in conversation in the verbs and nouns ending in er; but never in proper names; words derived from foreign languages; nor when the è is open grave, as in Jupiter, pater, mer, &c.

5th, Some suppress it in words ending in ir; but it is not the prevailing custom.

S. The final s, in reading, is always heard before a vowel. It is articulated as in yes, even before a consonant, in the words vis and cens; and in the Latin, and proper names, Pallas, bolus, &c.

In any other word, before a vowel, it has the articulation of a z, in which case it is often suppressed in conversation, but this would be a fault in reading.

T. The t final is generally articulated before a vowel; except

1. When it is preceded by another consonant; respect humain, effort étonnant, &c.

2. In quatre vingt-un, quatre vingt onze, though it be articulated in vingt et un, and even before consonants in the following numbers, up to vingt neuf inclusively.

3. In all plural nouns, and in et, teint, contrat, mût têt, profit, fruits.

4. It is silent in fort (adjective), fort et grand; but articulated in fort, (adverb), fort aimable.

X. The final x is always articulated, 1. as ks in Greek and Latin words: stix, préfix, &c.; 2. as the s of yes in Aix; Cadix, and like a z in all other words, but only before a vowel.

Z. Is silent before a vowel only in the word nez: it is frequently suppressed at the end of other words in conversation; but these and similar licences, though tolerated, can never be enforced as rules.

* The g and k in Italic type denote that, between them and the following vowel, a sound like e or y is interposed, the better to unite the letters, and soften a little their hard articulation. This softened articulation of the hard c and k, and g, is noticed in Steele's Grammar, p. 49; reproved in Nare's Orth. p. 28, as "a monster of pronunciation only heard on the English stage." It is given as a polite pronunciation by Mr. Walker, who, in his Pronouncing Dictionary, p. 13 and 21, directs us to pronounce card, guard, kind, &c. as if spelt, ke-hard, ghe-ard, or gyard, kyind, &c.

DIRECTIONS

FOR

Using the similar SOUNDS and ARTICULATIONS.

1. The figures over the vowels mark their respective sounds. To have them perfect, they must be stripped of their attending consonants, without losing any part of their peculiar sounds.

2. Two vowels in the same syllable are to be pronounced together, and the first shorter than the second. Thus in plê-tâ, the similar sounds for piété, the ê must be united with â, precisely as in the word hosier, the i is united with er.

3. ĭ marked with the figure 1, is equivalent to ie in field.

4. oo in the same syllable have a single figure, to show that they express a single sound, as in môod or gôod.

5. A vowel in Italic type is doubtful: if it be marked 1 or 3, it takes the middle sound marked 2, chiefly when the word is not the last of a sentence. Thus brăv, similar sound of brave, must be pronounced brăv before homme, and brăv after it; brâ-vôm, ôm-brăv.

But when an Italic vowel is marked 2 (which happens only in the penultima of verbs), it takes the sound marked 1 before a mute termination, except ô and ĕu, which when followed by an r before the e mute, take the sound designed by 3; thus â-vĭ-zâ, ô-nô-râ, dê-mĕu-râ, &c. similar sounds of aviser, honorer, demeurer, must become â-vĭz, ô-nôr dê-mĕur, to represent avise, honores, demeurent. Should the termination in ĕur not be the last word in a sentence, it must have its second sound. See p 16 and 17.

6. In nouns of the singular number, the final vowel marked 2, undergoes the same change in the plural; thus â-mî-trê-zôr, flêur, &c similar sounds of a-mi, tresor, fleur, become in the plural â-mî-trê-zôr, flêur.

7. The standards that have an u, or an n in Italic type, are peculiar to the French language. Look for them as directed in the foregoing table.

8. When u has no figure, it makes with the vowel e, one of the sounds of the diphthong eu in jêûne, mêute, bêurre.

9. The three nasal sounds that have no figure never vary.

This intermediate sound is very obvious in cue and argue, which are not pronounced kou, and argou, but as if a k or g were articulated before the pronoun you, so that kyou and argyou, offer the same sounds as cue and argue.

The sound of this y between the k or g, and the diphthong ou, is precisely that which the French interpose between them, and their u, as in curé, legume; and which they frequently express by an u after q or g before their e and i, as in manqué, quête, vainqueur, guette, guide, rigueur, &c. wherein these letters are less hard than in corps garde, though harder than in cet, cité, gêne, gîte.

10. An

bâr, bât, bâse: thère, êbb, ovêr: fîeld, fîg: rôbe, rôb, lôrd: môod, gôod.

10. An adjective or participle, whose feminine is not noticed in the similar spelling, is pronounced in the same manner for both genders, except the sound of â, which is somewhat longer for the feminine.

11. The syllables are divided as they are heard in conversation, and not as they are counted in poetry.

EXAMPLES.

Veiller, vè-îâ; the 2 marks è in êbb; the 3 â in bâse; and the l in Italic, the articulation of gl in seraglio. But when it is followed by a vowel, its similar sound must be vè-lêr. See page 16.

Courtisan, e, kôor-tî-zèn, zân. The first 2 denotes ôo in gôod; the second, î in fîg; the figure 1 and the n Italic, èn in èn-fânt: the next syllable separated by a comma, which is the feminine termination of that substantive, has the sound of â in bât, and n articulated as in man.

Poignard, pwâ-gnâr. The 2 marks â in bât; the 1 â in bâr; gn in the same syllable, the articulation of gn in poignant: and the à in Italic type denotes that à must be changed into â, when the word does not end a sentence.

Baguenaude, bâg-nôd. The 2 denotes â in bât; the 1 ô in rôbe; and g- being separated from n must be articulated as in magnificent.

Guerre, gêr. The 1 marks è in thère; and the g in Italic, the softened articulation of the hard g commented on after the foregoing table.

Jour, zôor. The 2 denotes ôo in gôod; and the z in Italic the articulation of z in azure.

[bâse, bût: jêûne, mêute, bêurre: ênfânt, cênt, liên: vin: mon: brun.]

CONJUGATIONS OF THE REGULAR VERBS.

A Verb is deemed regular when all its tenses are formed from the infinitive and the gerund.

There are four regular Conjugations. The first ends its infinitive in er, the second in ir, the third in oir, the fourth in re. The second is subdivided into three branches, and the fourth into five.

FIRST CONJUGATION.

Verbs ending in er.

Inf. Pr. pe-ser. Ger. pe-sant. Pa. pe-sé, e.
pé-zâ. pé-zén. pé-zâ.

An hyphen (—) before the end of an English word, shows that the beginning is spelt as in French.

N. B. A word without any of these abbreviations, belongs to the class of the last word that has one. Thus after Abricot, m, the two following words that have no letter after them, are likewise substantives masculine.

The semicolon (;) separates the several parts of speech to which the same word belongs. Ex. Boire, m.; va. bwâr. drink; to drink.

A syllable or letter separated by a comma, marks a plural, or a feminine termination. Ex. Travail, vaux, m. Grand, e, a.

When a consonant begins a feminine termination, that consonant is doubled in French. Ex. Mignon, ne, a. for Mignon, Mignonne.
